Camp Theme:
The Internet of Things

This leadership conference is designed to begin the transition of youth from a middle and high school perspective to a post-secondary education mindset at an early age. Students, known as Cadets, will be treated like incoming freshmen: they will check into the dormitory, live on campus, navigate the campus using a map to locate buildings, and independently arrive to their campus destinations on time. Learning opportunities, experiences, and exposure will be provided that will help them understand the value of education and continuous learning as they are introduced to the “Internet of Things,” which includes Big Data/Data Analytics, Artificial Intelligence, and Virtual and Augmented Reality. Presentations from college professors, business executives, government officials, and law enforcement officials will aid the Cadets in learning how these occupations and businesses are enhancing, embracing, and depending on the “Internet of Things” to promote their professions and improve the quality of life. We will explore the industries and jobs of the future and how leadership fits into the equation. All speakers will explain what it takes to be a leader. The Cadets will also engage in fun, educational activities which will help them assess, internalize, retain, and put their learning into practice.
